

FUNERAL OF BRO. ERMINOLD.

Eloquent Sermon by the Rev. Father Yorke—Prominent People Attend the Service.

Brother Erminold, late President of St. Mary's College, was laid to rest today with many tokens of grief and respect.

An immense throng gathered at the Church of the Immaculate Conception to witness the funeral ceremonies, which were beautiful and impressive.

Evidently the dead educator had left a strong impress on the hearts of the community, for hundreds of eyes dropped tears while Father Yorke delivered his eloquent and touching eulogy.

Long before 10 o'clock, the hour set for the funeral, the church was thronged with people. The interior wore the trappings of mourning throughout.

The great candlesticks on the altar were draped in crape, and the columns were also decorated with the same sombre badge of grief.

When the funeral cortege arrived at the church, the bier was borne by alumni of St. Mary's into the sanctuary between lines of students wearing white gloves, and placed below the altar. White flowers covered the top of the coffin. On the immediate right the seats were filled with Sisters of Mercy and Sisters of Charity.

On the left were the Christian Brothers and the students of St. Mary's. When the organ pealed forth its notes and choir raised the sacred chant, the stately ceremonial of the Catholic ritual never appeared more solemn or imposing. The singing of the choir was a glorious reminder of life in death, and carried in the notes the combined expression of grief and triumph.

The ceremony was a solemn requiem mass. Rev. Father Foley of St. Joseph's Church, Alameda, was the celebrant, assisted by Father Connolly of St. Paul's, San Francisco, Deacon, Father Collopy, Sub-Deacon, with Father Cranwell, Chaplain of St. Mary's College, as master of ceremonies. Father Foley sang the mass in splendid voice.

At the close of the ceremony, Rev. Father Peter C. Yorke, the eloquent divine of San Francisco, ascended the pulpit and preached the funeral sermon. During its delivery many of the students and others in the congregation wept. Father Yorke was nearly overcome by his feelings more than once during his sermon, and when he spoke the final apostrophe to the dead, his voice choked with emotion and he turned away to hide his tears.

Father Yorke took his text from St. John the Divine, chapter XIV, verse 13: "And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, 'Write, blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them.'"

In part he spoke as follows: "It is not too much presumption to believe that our dear friend and brother is numbered with the blessed today. He died in the Lord, and his works were with the Lord and for the children of the Lord. He left this miserable world in the name of God. His life was a life of works, a life of works for the sanctification of man and the glory of God. His works have followed him. His life was a work of self-sacrifice.

"Blessed are they who die in the Lord, for their works do follow them. The works of our departed brother do follow him. Shall we not give him our love and our prayers? It is not that he needs us, or needs anything we can do for him, but that our prayers should follow him as his good works follow him. Long ago he left all to follow Christ, his home, his family, and even his name. All his years were spent in God's pathway and the doing of good deeds. Our prayers wait him as he goes hence from among us to take his place in the abode of the blessed. Come to his assistance ye angels of the Lord and bear him to Abraham's bosom!

"He has fought the fight and kept the faith. Is not such a life worthy of remembrance? Dear friend, all thy life thou wast a teacher, and even in death thou still teachest in thy life thou showed the way, and in death thy example is a precept to guide us forward.

"Forty-eight years ago Charles O'Donnell was born in Ireland. He was born in the family of one of those honest, industrious, God-fearing farmers who constitute the backbone of Ireland. In early youth he learned the traditions of his native land and his mind became impregnated with its patriotic life and the devotion to the mother church that has always characterized its people. At his mother's knee he learned the precepts of the Catholic faith, to which he was so devoted all his life. As he loved its faith, he loved the land. Its romance and chivalry captivated his ardent imagination. He loved the history of Erin and her literature. He was jealous of her honor and devoted to the welfare of her children, both in this world and the next. He was not ashamed to carry around a primer of the Gaelic language, for he knew that the preservation of native speech is the touchstone of nationality.

"Twice has Ireland sent forth her sons for conquest; once as children of the Cross and once again as children of the sword. The Kings of Ireland went forth to the wars, bringing home much spoil of gold and silver, but a still more precious prize in the captive St. Patrick, who taught Ireland the Catholic faith. When they were converted to the true faith the sons of Erin went abroad throughout Europe spreading the light, building churches, monasteries, and monuments that bear their names to this day. They bore the cross in all lands as soldiers of Christ.

"When the armies of Ireland were defeated, her sons scattered to every country on the globe. They entered every army in Europe and left their bones on the field of every battle that was fought.

Scattered abroad, their hearts yearned for the land of their birth and the faith taught them in their childhood. If the exile could not have his country he cried for its faith. Father Erminold heard this cry of the exiled immigrant. His life was a work of self-sacrifice.

"Blessed are they who die in the Lord, for their works do follow them. The works of our departed brother do follow him. Shall we not give him our love and our prayers? It is not that he needs us, or needs anything we can do for him, but that our prayers should follow him as his good works follow him. Long ago he left all to follow Christ, his home, his family, and even his name. All his years were spent in God's pathway and the doing of good deeds. Our prayers wait him as he goes hence from among us to take his place in the abode of the blessed. Come to his assistance ye angels of the Lord and bear him to Abraham's bosom!

"He has fought the fight and kept the faith. Is not such a life worthy of remembrance? Dear friend, all thy life thou wast a teacher, and even in death thou still teachest in thy life thou showed the way, and in death thy example is a precept to guide us forward.

GOES IN TRIUMPH TO CITY OF CARACAS.

President Castro Enters at Head of a Big Army.

Rebels Are Now on the Run in Venezuela District.

CARACAS, Venezuela, Nov. 10.—President Castro made a triumphal official entry into Caracas yesterday at the head of 3,200 troops, amidst the ringing of bells and a display of fireworks.

President Castro reached Los Teques from La Victoria Saturday without having encountered any revolutionists on the way there and left Los Teques Sunday for Caracas by train over the German Railway, the bridges along the line which had been destroyed by the revolutionists having been repaired.

The flight of the armies of the revolution continues. Not even the Caracas revolutionary sympathizers can explain the split among the leaders of the movement or say what has become of the 10,000 soldiers who were under arms as late as November 2nd.

The government officials believe General Matos has gone in the direction of Tucacas.

President Castro intends to re-occupy Corro, Barcelona, Ciudad Bolivar and Cumana immediately.

On Saturday he sent 1,500 men under General Leopoldo Baptista to attack Corro.

WAS SOLD TO THE NATIVES

LITTLE WHALER WAS RENDERED USELESS IN THE ARCTIC.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 10.—The whaler Bowhead arrived today from the Arctic.

The Bowhead reports that the steam whaler William Baylies is en route to San Francisco.

On board the Baylies is the crew of the whaling schooner Penelope, which sailed from this port nearly three years ago, with a crew of six.

After accumulating a cargo worth $30,000, the little vessel struck an iceberg and was rendered unfit for service.

Her cargo was transferred to other whalers and the schooner, which was formerly a pleasure craft at San Diego, was sold to natives for bone and skins.

Scattered abroad, their hearts yearned for the land of their birth and the faith taught them in their childhood. If the exile could not have his country he cried for its faith. Father Erminold heard this cry of the exiled immigrant. His life was a work of self-sacrifice.

"Blessed are they who die in the Lord, for their works do follow them. The works of our departed brother do follow him. Shall we not give him our love and our prayers? It is not that he needs us, or needs anything we can do for him, but that our prayers should follow him as his good works follow him. Long ago he left all to follow Christ, his home, his family, and even his name. All his years were spent in God's pathway and the doing of good deeds. Our prayers wait him as he goes hence from among us to take his place in the abode of the blessed. Come to his assistance ye angels of the Lord and bear him to Abraham's bosom!

"He has fought the fight and kept the faith. Is not such a life worthy of remembrance? Dear friend, all thy life thou wast a teacher, and even in death thou still teachest in thy life thou showed the way, and in death thy example is a precept to guide us forward.

"Forty-eight years ago Charles O'Donnell was born in Ireland. He was born in the family of one of those honest, industrious, God-fearing farmers who constitute the backbone of Ireland. In early youth he learned the traditions of his native land and his mind became impregnated with its patriotic life and the devotion to the mother church that has always characterized its people. At his mother's knee he learned the precepts of the Catholic faith, to which he was so devoted all his life. As he loved its faith, he loved the land. Its romance and chivalry captivated his ardent imagination. He loved the history of Erin and her literature. He was jealous of her honor and devoted to the welfare of her children, both in this world and the next. He was not ashamed to carry around a primer of the Gaelic language, for he knew that the preservation of native speech is the touchstone of nationality.

"Twice has Ireland sent forth her sons for conquest; once as children of the Cross and once again as children of the sword. The Kings of Ireland went forth to the wars, bringing home much spoil of gold and silver, but a still more precious prize in the captive St. Patrick, who taught Ireland the Catholic faith. When they were converted to the true faith the sons of Erin went abroad throughout Europe spreading the light, building churches, monasteries, and monuments that bear their names to this day. They bore the cross in all lands as soldiers of Christ.

"When the armies of Ireland were defeated, her sons scattered to every country on the globe. They entered every army in Europe and left their bones on the field of every battle that was fought.

Scattered abroad, their hearts yearned for the land of their birth and the faith taught them in their childhood. If the exile could not have his country he cried for its faith. Father Erminold heard this cry of the exiled immigrant. His life was a work of self-sacrifice.

"Blessed are they who die in the Lord, for their works do follow them. The works of our departed brother do follow him. Shall we not give him our love and our prayers? It is not that he needs us, or needs anything we can do for him, but that our prayers should follow him as his good works follow him. Long ago he left all to follow Christ, his home, his family, and even his name. All his years were spent in God's pathway and the doing of good deeds. Our prayers wait him as he goes hence from among us to take his place in the abode of the blessed. Come to his assistance ye angels of the Lord and bear him to Abraham's bosom!

"He has fought the fight and kept the faith. Is not such a life worthy of remembrance? Dear friend, all thy life thou wast a teacher, and even in death thou still teachest in thy life thou showed the way, and in death thy example is a precept to guide us forward.

"Forty-eight years ago Charles O'Donnell was born in Ireland. He was born in the family of one of those honest, industrious, God-fearing farmers who constitute the backbone of Ireland. In early youth he learned the traditions of his native land and his mind became impregnated with its patriotic life and the devotion to the mother church that has always characterized its people. At his mother's knee he learned the precepts of the Catholic faith, to which he was so devoted all his life. As he loved its faith, he loved the land. Its romance and chivalry captivated his ardent imagination. He loved the history of Erin and her literature. He was jealous of her honor and devoted to the welfare of her children, both in this world and the next. He was not ashamed to carry around a primer of the Gaelic language, for he knew that the preservation of native speech is the touchstone of nationality.

ENTIRE CABINET RESIGNS FROM OFFICE.

King Alfonso of Spain Has Not Decided on Program

Gorles Will Suspend Sitting Until the Problem Is Solved.

MADRID, No. 10.—Premier Sagasta today tendered to King Alfonso the resignation of the entire Cabinet.

The King will decide tomorrow whether he will accept the ministers' resignations.

The Cortes will be informed of the crisis today and will suspend its sittings until it is solved.

Should the King accord a continuance of his confidence in Premier Sagasta, the Ministry will be modified and, probably, the Ministers of War, Marine and Justice will be sacrificed.

CAPTURED A BOLD FOOTPAD.

GOOD WORK IS DONE BY A SAN FRANCISCO POLICEMAN.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 10.—It would appear that Policeman Steve Bunner has succeeded in dispelling the "hoodoo" that has hovered over star No. 55, until recently worn by Patrick Sullivan. After a spirited dash early this morning Bunner captured a footpad whom the police believe has a criminal record and who was caught red-handed in an effort to rob a citizen.

Maurice Pierre, a stranger in the city, was on his way to the California House, Montgomery avenue and Kearney street, about 2:45 o'clock this morning when he was suddenly attacked near the entrance of the hotel by a man who stepped out of a dark doorway. The footpad pursued the victim from behind, tripping him and attempting to prevent an outcry.

The men fell to the sidewalk together, but before the robber could throttle Pierre, the latter screamed for help. Policeman Bunner was on duty a short distance away and ran to the scene. He arrived in time to see the footpad disappearing around a corner, dropping his hat as he ran. Bunner gave chase and caught the thug on Clay street below Sansome, overpowered and handcuffed him.

The prisoner gave the name of Joseph Woods and did not deny his crime. He was charged at the City Prison with an attempt to commit robbery and upon hearing the nature of the accusation said, "I only wish I had broken his neck."

Pierre has fully identified his assailant and the police think the capture may prove to be a very important one.

Scattered abroad, their hearts yearned for the land of their birth and the faith taught them in their childhood. If the exile could not have his country he cried for its faith. Father Erminold heard this cry of the exiled immigrant. His life was a work of self-sacrifice.

"Blessed are they who die in the Lord, for their works do follow them. The works of our departed brother do follow him. Shall we not give him our love and our prayers? It is not that he needs us, or needs anything we can do for him, but that our prayers should follow him as his good works follow him. Long ago he left all to follow Christ, his home, his family, and even his name. All his years were spent in God's pathway and the doing of good deeds. Our prayers wait him as he goes hence from among us to take his place in the abode of the blessed. Come to his assistance ye angels of the Lord and bear him to Abraham's bosom!

"He has fought the fight and kept the faith. Is not such a life worthy of remembrance? Dear friend, all thy life thou wast a teacher, and even in death thou still teachest in thy life thou showed the way, and in death thy example is a precept to guide us forward.

"Forty-eight years ago Charles O'Donnell was born in Ireland. He was born in the family of one of those honest, industrious, God-fearing farmers who constitute the backbone of Ireland. In early youth he learned the traditions of his native land and his mind became impregnated with its patriotic life and the devotion to the mother church that has always characterized its people. At his mother's knee he learned the precepts of the Catholic faith, to which he was so devoted all his life. As he loved its faith, he loved the land. Its romance and chivalry captivated his ardent imagination. He loved the history of Erin and her literature. He was jealous of her honor and devoted to the welfare of her children, both in this world and the next. He was not ashamed to carry around a primer of the Gaelic language, for he knew that the preservation of native speech is the touchstone of nationality.

"Twice has Ireland sent forth her sons for conquest; once as children of the Cross and once again as children of the sword. The Kings of Ireland went forth to the wars, bringing home much spoil of gold and silver, but a still more precious prize in the captive St. Patrick, who taught Ireland the Catholic faith. When they were converted to the true faith the sons of Erin went abroad throughout Europe spreading the light, building churches, monasteries, and monuments that bear their names to this day. They bore the cross in all lands as soldiers of Christ.

"When the armies of Ireland were defeated, her sons scattered to every country on the globe. They entered every army in Europe and left their bones on the field of every battle that was fought.

Scattered abroad, their hearts yearned for the land of their birth and the faith taught them in their childhood. If the exile could not have his country he cried for its faith. Father Erminold heard this cry of the exiled immigrant. His life was a work of self-sacrifice.

"Blessed are they who die in the Lord, for their works do follow them. The works of our departed brother do follow him. Shall we not give him our love and our prayers? It is not that he needs us, or needs anything we can do for him, but that our prayers should follow him as his good works follow him. Long ago he left all to follow Christ, his home, his family, and even his name. All his years were spent in God's pathway and the doing of good deeds. Our prayers wait him as he goes hence from among us to take his place in the abode of the blessed. Come to his assistance ye angels of the Lord and bear him to Abraham's bosom!

"He has fought the fight and kept the faith. Is not such a life worthy of remembrance? Dear friend, all thy life thou wast a teacher, and even in death thou still teachest in thy life thou showed the way, and in death thy example is a precept to guide us forward.

"Forty-eight years ago Charles O'Donnell was born in Ireland. He was born in the family of one of those honest, industrious, God-fearing farmers who constitute the backbone of Ireland. In early youth he learned the traditions of his native land and his mind became impregnated with its patriotic life and the devotion to the mother church that has always characterized its people. At his mother's knee he learned the precepts of the Catholic faith, to which he was so devoted all his life. As he loved its faith, he loved the land. Its romance and chivalry captivated his ardent imagination. He loved the history of Erin and her literature. He was jealous of her honor and devoted to the welfare of her children, both in this world and the next. He was not ashamed to carry around a primer of the Gaelic language, for he knew that the preservation of native speech is the touchstone of nationality.

"Twice has Ireland sent forth her sons for conquest; once as children of the Cross and once again as children of the sword. The Kings of Ireland went forth to the wars, bringing home much spoil of gold and silver, but a still more precious prize in the captive St. Patrick, who taught Ireland the Catholic faith. When they were converted to the true faith the sons of Erin went abroad throughout Europe spreading the light, building churches, monasteries, and monuments that bear their names to this day. They bore the cross in all lands as soldiers of Christ.

"When the armies of Ireland were defeated, her sons scattered to every country on the globe. They entered every army in Europe and left their bones on the field of every battle that was fought.

JEWISH LONDON CELEBRATES THE DAY.

Lord Mayor's Parade Goes Through Unfashionable Section

Some Unique Things Seen in the Grand Procession.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Today for the first time in the history of London the Lord Mayor's procession traversed the unfashionable thoroughfare of Petticoat Lane, in the heart of the Ghetto, in recognition of the Jewish ancestry of Sir Marcus Samuel, the new Lord Mayor. Jewish London especially celebrated the event.

The poorest inhabitants of Whitechapel and Hound's Ditch were banqueting at the expense of their wealthier co-religionists.

The quaint annual progress of the chief executive of the city through the streets of the metropolis was probably more brilliant than usual.

A unique feature was a float representative of the Anglo-Japanese alliance, surmounted by the arms of both countries and surrounded by a guard of Japanese and British blue jackets.

SCANDAL IN A DIVORCE.

WHY THE WIFE OF A LAWYER WANTS TO SECURE A SEPARATION.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 10.—In an amended complaint for divorce filed this morning by the wife of Attorney John W. Dorsey, Mrs. Dorsey explains why she went to Paris in 1897 with her daughter Gladys and remained in seclusion there for two years.

It seems that there was another woman in the case. This other woman, Mrs. Dorsey bluntly alleges, is Anna Louise Sanderson. Concerning the friendship existing at that time between Mr. Dorsey and Miss Sanderson Mrs. Dorsey has strong suspicion, which are stated with legal directness in a document handed to the County Clerk today.

Mrs. Dorsey further relates that when her husband visited her in Paris, notwithstanding her great mental anguish, she was disposed to condone this first offense.

IN FORGIVING MOOD. But while she was in this mood Mrs. Dorsey alleges that her husband went away with her daughter Gladys and took the first steamer for America.

She then learned of one more woman, and this final discovery stole her heart.

Mrs. Dorsey alleges that the last name of the woman is unknown to her. She calls her for convenience Louise Doe. It is alleged that Mr. Dorsey and Louise Doe lived happily in a house on Oak street, near Van Ness avenue, where the surrounding really were all that could be asked.

As prayer Mrs. Dorsey asks the court to grant her generous alimony, since her husband earns $9,000 a year in the practice of his profession and has a large law library.

Mrs. Dorsey would like to resume her maiden name of Mattie Brinkerhoff.

Scattered abroad, their hearts yearned for the land of their birth and the faith taught them in their childhood. If the exile could not have his country he cried for its faith. Father Erminold heard this cry of the exiled immigrant. His life was a work of self-sacrifice.

"Blessed are they who die in the Lord, for their works do follow them. The works of our departed brother do follow him. Shall we not give him our love and our prayers? It is not that he needs us, or needs anything we can do for him, but that our prayers should follow him as his good works follow him. Long ago he left all to follow Christ, his home, his family, and even his name. All his years were spent in God's pathway and the doing of good deeds. Our prayers wait him as he goes hence from among us to take his place in the abode of the blessed. Come to his assistance ye angels of the Lord and bear him to Abraham's bosom!

"He has fought the fight and kept the faith. Is not such a life worthy of remembrance? Dear friend, all thy life thou wast a teacher, and even in death thou still teachest in thy life thou showed the way, and in death thy example is a precept to guide us forward.

"Forty-eight years ago Charles O'Donnell was born in Ireland. He was born in the family of one of those honest, industrious, God-fearing farmers who constitute the backbone of Ireland. In early youth he learned the traditions of his native land and his mind became impregnated with its patriotic life and the devotion to the mother church that has always characterized its people. At his mother's knee he learned the precepts of the Catholic faith, to which he was so devoted all his life. As he loved its faith, he loved the land. Its romance and chivalry captivated his ardent imagination. He loved the history of Erin and her literature. He was jealous of her honor and devoted to the welfare of her children, both in this world and the next. He was not ashamed to carry around a primer of the Gaelic language, for he knew that the preservation of native speech is the touchstone of nationality.

"Twice has Ireland sent forth her sons for conquest; once as children of the Cross and once again as children of the sword. The Kings of Ireland went forth to the wars, bringing home much spoil of gold and silver, but a still more precious prize in the captive St. Patrick, who taught Ireland the Catholic faith. When they were converted to the true faith the sons of Erin went abroad throughout Europe spreading the light, building churches, monasteries, and monuments that bear their names to this day. They bore the cross in all lands as soldiers of Christ.

"When the armies of Ireland were defeated, her sons scattered to every country on the globe. They entered every army in Europe and left their bones on the field of every battle that was fought.

Scattered abroad, their hearts yearned for the land of their birth and the faith taught them in their childhood. If the exile could not have his country he cried for its faith. Father Erminold heard this cry of the exiled immigrant. His life was a work of self-sacrifice.

"Blessed are they who die in the Lord, for their works do follow them. The works of our departed brother do follow him. Shall we not give him our love and our prayers? It is not that he needs us, or needs anything we can do for him, but that our prayers should follow him as his good works follow him. Long ago he left all to follow Christ, his home, his family, and even his name. All his years were spent in God's pathway and the doing of good deeds. Our prayers wait him as he goes hence from among us to take his place in the abode of the blessed. Come to his assistance ye angels of the Lord and bear him to Abraham's bosom!

PRESIDENT WILL GO ON A TRIP.

He Will Visit Memphis on His Tour South.

Proposes to Take a Rest For Five Days and Go Hunting.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—President Roosevelt will leave Washington tonight to be absent nearly two weeks. He will be accompanied by Secretary Cortelyou and his physician, Dr. George A. Lund of the Navy. At noon tomorrow the President will attend the exercises at the dedication of the new Chamber of Commerce building at New York. In the evening the party will be the guests at the banquet given by the New York Chamber of Commerce. The President will deliver a speech at the banquet.

At midnight tomorrow the President and his party will leave New York for Memphis, going by way of Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and Louisville, and arriving at Memphis on Thursday morning.

From Memphis the President will go to Mississippi on a bear hunt as the guest of President Fish of the Illinois Central Railroad. He will be absent on the hunt five days.

The President will return to Memphis on the morning of Wednesday, the 19th instant, and during that day and evening will participate in the celebration in honor of General Lake Wright, Vice-Governor of the Philippines. He will deliver a speech on the occasion.

At midnight on the 20th the President will start for Washington, arriving there on the morning of Friday the 21st instant. The day will be spent here on the morning of the 22nd, the President will go to Philadelphia to attend the exercises of Founders' Day, returning again to Washington on the morning of the 23rd instant.

DECISION GIVEN ON BONDS.

IRRIGATION AND FRUIT COMPANIES GO TO COURT FOR AN OPINION.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 10.—In the suit of E. C. Chapman, receiver of the Woodbridge Canal and Irrigation Company, appellant, versus the Atlantic Trust Company and the Woodbridge Canal and Irrigation Company, appellees, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals issued an order of reversal and the cause to be remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with the opinion. Judges Gilbert, Ross and Hawley heard the case. Ross delivered the opinion.

In this suit, which was brought by the trustee of certain bonds issued by the defendant Woodbridge Canal and Irrigation Company of the face value of $1,000 each, bearing interest at the rate of six per cent per annum, for the foreclosure of a mortgage given upon the property of the company as security for their payment, a receiver was appointed by the court at its beginning, who took possession of the property, consisting in part of an irrigation system, continued its operation pending the litigation and until the confirmation of its sale made under a decree of foreclosure and sale which was entered in the suit on the 15th of September, 1897. The decree adjudged the principal and interest of the bonds to be due and payable to the trustee, and further adjudged that there was then due, owing and unpaid various sums for and on account of the costs and expenses of the mortgages.

At once Bradner Lee started for this city. He is now at the Pacific Hotel. His conference with Dr. Pardee today includes not only discussion of the Governor-elect's wishes regarding the date of the trip to Los Angeles, but also the matter of bringing "Teddy's Terrors" from Los Angeles to this city to give a demonstration here, and to accompany Dr. Pardee on his tour.

It was planned during the campaign that "Teddy's Terrors" should visit this city as a campaign argument, but instead the Terrors toured only Southern California.

The organization is made up of prominent and wealthy business men and political leaders in the south, has uniforms that are blue and pictures a yell that is bloodcurdling, and brains enough to outfit an entire political party. Its tours have been notable events in the territory traversed.

The Governor-elect, Pardee and the State Central Committee can make the necessary arrangements with Chairman Lee, the Terrors will come up here about November 15th, traveling in special cars, to remain here about three days, and then return to Los Angeles, escorted Dr. Pardee and the precious championship banner.

Scattered abroad, their hearts yearned for the land of their birth and the faith taught them in their childhood. If the exile could not have his country he cried for its faith. Father Erminold heard this cry of the exiled immigrant. His life was a work of self-sacrifice.

"Blessed are they who die in the Lord, for their works do follow them. The works of our departed brother do follow him. Shall we not give him our love and our prayers? It is not that he needs us, or needs anything we can do for him, but that our prayers should follow him as his good works follow him. Long ago he left all to follow Christ, his home, his family, and even his name. All his years were spent in God's pathway and the doing of good deeds. Our prayers wait him as he goes hence from among us to take his place in the abode of the blessed. Come to his assistance ye angels of the Lord and bear him to Abraham's bosom!

"He has fought the fight and kept the faith. Is not such a life worthy of remembrance? Dear friend, all thy life thou wast a teacher, and even in death thou still teachest in thy life thou showed the way, and in death thy example is a precept to guide us forward.

"Forty-eight years ago Charles O'Donnell was born in Ireland. He was born in the family of one of those honest, industrious, God-fearing farmers who constitute the backbone of Ireland. In early youth he learned the traditions of his native land and his mind became impregnated with its patriotic life and the devotion to the mother church that has always characterized its people. At his mother's knee he learned the precepts of the Catholic faith, to which he was so devoted all his life. As he loved its faith, he loved the land. Its romance and chivalry captivated his ardent imagination. He loved the history of Erin and her literature. He was jealous of her honor and devoted to the welfare of her children, both in this world and the next. He was not ashamed to carry around a primer of the Gaelic language, for he knew that the preservation of native speech is the touchstone of nationality.

"Twice has Ireland sent forth her sons for conquest; once as children of the Cross and once again as children of the sword. The Kings of Ireland went forth to the wars, bringing home much spoil of gold and silver, but a still more precious prize in the captive St. Patrick, who taught Ireland the Catholic faith. When they were converted to the true faith the sons of Erin went abroad throughout Europe spreading the light, building churches, monasteries, and monuments that bear their names to this day. They bore the cross in all lands as soldiers of Christ.

"When the armies of Ireland were defeated, her sons scattered to every country on the globe. They entered every army in Europe and left their bones on the field of every battle that was fought.

Scattered abroad, their hearts yearned for the land of their birth and the faith taught them in their childhood. If the exile could not have his country he cried for its faith. Father Erminold heard this cry of the exiled immigrant. His life was a work of self-sacrifice.

"Blessed are they who die in the Lord, for their works do follow them. The works of our departed brother do follow him. Shall we not give him our love and our prayers? It is not that he needs us, or needs anything we can do for him, but that our prayers should follow him as his good works follow him. Long ago he left all to follow Christ, his home, his family, and even his name. All his years were spent in God's pathway and the doing of good deeds. Our prayers wait him as he goes hence from among us to take his place in the abode of the blessed. Come to his assistance ye angels of the Lord and bear him to Abraham's bosom!

CHANGES IN THE COUNTY OFFICES.

Deputies Will Be Changed Around in Many Departments on January 1.

Now that the election is over and the official canvass of the returns has begun, the politicians have turned their attention to the deputyships and there is much speculation as to who will secure the coveted plums.

Naturally, the greatest interest centers in the two offices, the chiefs of which will be changed.

John Blahon, the newly elected Sheriff, declared to day that he would not decide upon his deputies until after the official canvass. It is said that a promise will be kept and that Constable Jack Williamson will receive a deputyship under the new Sheriff. It is also reported that Deputy Sheriff John Striker of Berkeley will be made Chief Jailor.

Regarding the Auditor's office it is said that Deputies Hanfin and Dean will go, the former to Treasurer Fieldler's office.

Deputy Auditor Myron Whidden will, however, in all probability, be retained.

There will be no changes in the offices of County Tax Collector Barber and District Attorney Allen.

In the latter's office a new clerk will be added, according to an act of the last Legislature, and the plum will go to Everett J. Brown.

106 TELEGRAPH AVE.
Cor. 17th, East Side of Street.
Hot Soups every day. Roast
Boiled Ham, Meat Pies, Fried Fish, Cold
Fish Balls, Baked Beans, Salads, Puddings, Home Made Pies, Cakes, Olives,
Sauerkraut, Sausages, Cheese, Ranch
Sauce, Home Made Jellies, Jam and Mayonnaise Dressing.
Branch of Cape Ann Bakery.
THO. ZIEGLER.

